ALLIED AIR ATTACKS ON GERMANY, 1942

The following pages give as complete a picture of the physical effect of allied raids during 1942, as the availability of original German documents permits. As far as possible all major raids have been dealt with including some of those which were scattered. Some details are perforce rather scanty. It will be noted that at Appendix 'A' are some facts concerning the actual "scatter" of some of those raids which were not so accurately carried out.

At Appendix 'B' and 'C' are Town and Chronological Indices respectively.

218 phosphorus bombs of 30 lbs.

The raid was split up by the defences so that during the first attacks small fires were started in M/L as well as in the wooded country to the west of M. These fires, particularly in the Forestry Commission Area of Bad Duerkheim and Hardenburg soon spread and so diverted the main attack from M/L. In the forest fire area about 20000 incendiaries, 18 mines and 40 H.E. fell. The airfield Mannheim Town was hit by about 20 incendiaries, A.A. sights by 35 and military premises by about 300. At the I.G. Farben works at Oppau the electricity mains from the Rhein-Westfaelischen Electricity works were cut by H.E. and incendiaries resulting in a stoppage of nitrogen production for  $1\frac{1}{2}$  days, equal to a loss of 270 tons or .13% of the yearly production. Damage to huts for foreign workers was also caused by fire at the Ludwigshafen works. Slight damage causing no fall in production was suffered at the Giulini Chemical Factory by blast from a mine, and by fire at the Mineral Oil Works of Dr. F. Raschig. Considerable damage was caused at the Railway Goods Depot in Mannheim and a gasometer at the Ludwigshafen Shunting Station was burnt out.

Damage; Houses: 27 destroyed
9 severely damaged
389 slightly damaged.

Casualties: 4 dead and 17 injured.

19/20 SEPTEMBER

Air Raid Warning sounded at 0012 hours on 20th September, i.e. with the raiding force about 10 minutes flying time from the Town. The first two waves rendez-voused at Starnbergersee-Ammersee and from there flew past Munich in an easterly direction. The third wave reached Munich at 0037. Of the approx. 65 aircraft reported over Reich territory about 30 were observed in the Munich area, of which 10-15 probably reached the Town Centre. They were 4 - engined bombers.

Bombs dropped:

55 mines (1 dud)
26 H.E.
58 Oil bombs (5 duds)
256 Phosphorus
5000 incendiary (some with H.E. head) } 116 duds
314 flares.

Damage:

Thanks to the activity of the Flak only a few aircraft reached the Town centre. The comparatively large amount of damage would otherwise have reached catastrophic proportions. There were 71 major fires. Fire fighting appliances and crews were brought in from Ingolstadt and Augsburg. Flak expended 8000 rounds of 8.8cm, 36000 rounds of 2cm and 2000 3.7 cm shells.

From available original German documents it is impossible to analyse the damage to dwelling houses exactly but it appears that there were about 80 destroyed and some hundreds damaged. In addition 73 buildings occupied by industrial or commercial undertakings were destroyed (including 1 hospital). 100 were severely damaged and about 500 damaged to a lesser degree. 7 industrial concerns suffered damaged which caused 100% fall in production for an indefinite period.

44 buildings occupied by the Armed Forces were hit, of which 2 were destroyed, 5 severely damaged and 37 received medium or slight damage.

One building (the Money Order Office) of the Post Office, buildings of the railway stations Prinz-Ludwig Hohe and Solln were also hit. Tramway traffic was only interrupted for a short time, although the Tramway Depot in the Auusseren Wienerstrasse was severely damaged. Two gasometers containing 28000 and 14000 cubic metres respectively were burnt out. 35 cases of damage to gas and water mains and power cables are reported. Also some damages to streets.

/short

Casualties:

144 dead, 413 injured and 6069 homeless.

Particularly noteworthy is the effect on buildings of the horizontal blast effect of those bombs which explode by a sensitive contact fuse on paved streets or courtyards. Although these bombs leave only a small hole at the point of explosion, the horizontal blast is so great that the ground floor of 3-4 houses on each side of the street was simply shot away, so that the upper 3-4 floors collapsed vertically. Well under-pinned solid ceilings (to cellar air-raid shelters) (girder and concrete) were able to withstand the sudden increase of weight, so that those underneath could be dug out.

21/22 DECEMBER

Of 50-60 aircraft reported in the LGK VII approx. 15 took part in the raid on Munich which lasted from 2110 hours to 2152 hours. Due to prompt action by the Flak around Munich it was not possible for all aircraft to penetrate to the Town Centre to unload their bombs. Fog over the town and along the Isar probably cut down visibility and thereby caused most of the bomb load to be dropped in the SW of the town. A specific target could not be discerned. The areas chiefly affected were: Forstenried, Solln, Waldfriedhof, and Westend in the South and Nymphenburg and Allach in the West Sectors. Only a few bombs were dropped on the inner town. Visibility at higher altitudes and outside the town towards Gauting and Starnberg was good. There was a full moon. In the inner town and along the Isar there was thick persistent fog to a height of about 150 metres.

Bombs dropped:

14 mines
48 H.E.
2 oil bombs.
170 phosphorus bombs (38 duds)

/5800

5800 incendiaries (573 duds)
4 Flares and a large number of leaflets.

Due to the fact that a high percentage of the bombs fell in open country the amount of damage to buildings and consequently also the number of casualties is small compared with the weight of bombs dropped. There were 48 instances of buildings destroyed and 176 damaged. A mine hit a military hospital at Schloss Nymphenburg, injuring 13 soldiers. The tram depots in the Westend-strasse and Hofmannstrasse suffered severe damage. At the Westend-strasse depot 88 trams and 31 buses were destroyed or severely damaged. 2 military installations were severely and 6 slightly damaged. Slight damage only to railway and post office installations. 1 Transformer house of the Electricity Works was destroyed by a mine. A gas works was also damaged by fire.

Casualties:

19 dead, 48 injured and 376 homeless.

Over the entire administrative area of Munich the following number of bombs are reported to have fallen:-

	14 mines
	2 Oil bombs
about	93 H.E.
"	270 phosphorus bombs
"	12624 incendiary bombs
"	51 flares

The following casualties are reported over the entire area:

25 dead and 55 injured.

LGK XII/XIII

29/30 JULY

This was the first heavy raid on Saarbruecken, the alarm being sounded at 0119 hours. It was a very bright night which enabled the raiders to drop their bombs in large numbers on a practically undefended town, which had no Flak defences worth mentioning. The available Flak consisted only of a few light guns, which were intended for the protection of important industrial works. One of these was put out of action by a direct hit, killing 7 soldiers. The raiders could therefore attack the town without opposition for 1½ hours from 0130 to 0300 hours, partly at low level.

Bombs dropped:

21 mines
441 H.E. (350 large, 74 medium)
(9 duds/D.A.)
15500 incendiaries
840 phosphorus
8 flares and a large number of leaflets.

The main attack was directed at the Town Centre (main business street Adolf-Hitler Strasse) and the railways, where at the Goods Station the goods sheds were burnt out, the coach works at the Central Station destroyed, 100 passenger coaches burnt out, 29 locomotives damaged and in many places the track was torn up and installations destroyed. Railway traffic was therefore at a standstill for a short time, causing the loss of man-hours and delay in the supply of food. Tramway communications were interrupted by destruction of overhead cables, damage was also sustained by a number of Post Office buildings and installations. Damage to industrial plants includes:

Burbacher Foundry: Coke oven destroyed and laboratory burnt down, causing 100% fall in production for an indefinite period.

Luettgens Coach Factory: Severe damage to roofs of all buildings, production interrupted for a few days.

I.G. Farben Oxygen Plant: High tension plant, workshops, cooling

EVIDENCE REGARDING SOME "SCATTER" RAIDS

NO. 1 - 10/11 MARCH, 1942

On 19th March the following particulars of bombs dropped are reported, covering 5 ARP Areas - Westfalia North and South, Essen, Duesseldorf and Cologne-Aachen:

1 mine
some 130 H.E.
1500 incendiaries
2 phosphorus drums

A rough break-down shows that:

Westfalia N.	received	2+H.E.	+ incend.
" S.	"	26 H.E.	900 incend.
Essen	"	40 H.E.	200 incend. and 1 ph. drum.
Duesseldorf	"	1 H.E.
Cologne-Aachen	"	13 H.E.	51 incend.

According to a map showing locations of incidents 170 H.E.'s and 1550 incendiaries are reported as falling on 48 places. This included 44 H.E.'s and 12 incendiaries on a group of decoy sites. Among the places shown as targets are:

Essen, Hilden, Dortmund, Herne, Remscheid, Recklinghausen, Hagen, Herten, Gelsenkirchen, Bochum, Oberhausen, Wuppertal, Cologne, Goch, Duermen. There is also evidence of incidents as far away as Holland - Arnhem and Rotterdam. 60 Aircraft are reported to have attacked between 2150 and 0045 hours, of which 3 was claimed to have been shot down.

Source: E.809 (Min. of Public Information and Propaganda)

NO. 2 - 12/13 MARCH, 1942.

Records show that Kiel was attacked by 28 aircraft which dropped 50 H.E. bombs, 4 of which did not explode and 21 of which fell on the Deutsche Works.

Besides these, records show that damage was caused at Wellsee, near Ploen, and 9 H.E.'s were dropped at 2 places in the neighbourhood of Eckernfoerde. Also some 40 H.E.'s fell in the districts of Rendsburg and Flensburg-Land. 4 H.E.'s are also reported in Neu-Jabel in Mecklenburg, near Ludwigslust.

In the ARP Areas of Schleswig-Holstein and Mecklenburg a total of 140 H.E. bombs were dropped. This figure should probably be increased by an indefinite number as a quantity of incendiaries are reported which were probably small H.E.'s.

Mention is made of quenching 3 fires which were started by flares (not incendiaries). Special attention is drawn to the fact that of 54 H.E.'s, 28 (including 2 duds) fell in gardens or open country.

2 Fire and 2 Medical Gruppen were sent to Wellsee to help at the hutted camp of the Germaia Yards.

NO. 3 - 13/14 MARCH, 1942.

Although the raid on this night was aimed at Cologne, where good results were obtained, the bomb load (159.8 tons) was scattered over a fairly wide area at places as far apart as Wesel, north of Oberhausen, and the Siegkreis, south of Cologne.

In the three ARP Districts of Duesseldorf, Essen and Cologne-Aachen the following numbers of bombs are reported to have fallen:

5 mines
200 H.E.
5000-5600 incendiaries and
21 phosphorus drums

of which

4 mines
104 H.E.
3569 incendiaries (incl. 22 250 lb. oil bombs)
and 10 phosphorus drums

fell on Cologne. In the Siegkreis

22 H.E. and
100 incendiaries

are reported to have been dropped. At Bruenen near Wesel about 1500 incendiaries were dropped and a decoy site was attacked by M.G. In addition Duesseldorf, Wuppertal, Leverkusen, Opladen, Grevenbroich received about 11 H.E. and some 500 incendiaries.

Cf. Narrative IV, page 136 and Appendix 21.

NO. 4 - 25/26 MARCH, 1942

Records confirm that this Essen raid was scattered and shows that 480 H.E. and 5420 incendiaries were dropped on 5 ARP Areas, namely Westfalia-North and South, Essen, Duesseldorf and Cologne-Aachen. Some of the incendiaries were 250 lbs. A map compiled of the raid at about 0800 on 26th March records only about 60 aircraft as taking part. This is most certainly an underestimate, due possibly to the concentration of numbers in the night attacking forces.

Of the bombs dropped on approx. 25 places some 100 H.E.'s and 40 incendiaries fell on 6 decoy sites clustered between Solingen and Leverkusen (not in the Rheinberg district).

NO. 11 - 16/17 SEPTEMBER, 1942

Although a fairly large quantity of bombs were dropped on Essen, the primary target, German documents show that a not inconsiderable load was dropped on fairly widely distant areas. In addition to the ARP Area of Essen a further 6 Areas are reported to have been attacked. These are: Hessen-Nassau, Moselland, Westfalia North and South, Cologne-Aachen and Duesseldorf. The following table shows details of bombs dropped.

ARP Area	Mines	H.E.	Incend.	Ph.B's.	Ph.Drs.

Westfalia South	several	15	17550
Westfalia North	9	47	11000
Cologne-Aachen		some			some
Duesseldorf		54	453 +	some

The above figures are reported as soon after the raid as 18th September and are undoubtedly an underestimation.

Some indication of the damage caused in various towns is given as follows:-
